Privacy Policy

On every visit to our website our web server automatically recognises only your IP address and not your email address. We do not retain any information on a visit to our website. This information is used to individualise the content and layout of our web pages for each individual visitor. The information is only used internally, and is not passed on to other organisations for commercial purposes.

We use cookies on this website (a cookie is a small file that is sent by an internet server and installs itself on the hard disk of your computer; it records the traces of the internet site visited and contains a number of details of this visit):

- to register information sessions, such as information on items you add to your shopping list. We have no partnerships or special relationships with third parties on the internet.

If we transfer or receive your data on our website, we always use the coding technologies that are recognised as the accepted standards within the IT sector. We have introduced the necessary security measures in order to prevent the loss, unlawful use or alteration of information that we receive on our website. If we transfer data to third parties with whom we have a contractual relationship, then these third parties must take the following security measures in the context of the contractual conditions:
